At 8:32 a.m. an earthquake signaled the beginning of Mount St. Helens' eruption.

- 1 Magma rising inside the mountain over a period of weeks created a bulge on the northside. At 8:32 a.m., a 5.1 magnitude earthquake broke the bulge loose, causing the northside to dislodge into a massive avalanche.
- 2 The avalanche released built up pressure from magmatic gases, resulting in a northern lateral explosion. The blast created a 17-18 mile fan-shaped path of destruction.
